By decreasing the unemployment rate, the country can have a faster economic system. The government should employ more people instead of taking their jobs without reason.

SUMMARY

- El Salvador is a small country located in Central America. In some ways, its economies is pretty good, but there are some problems. El Salvador is no really exporting advanced products. The good thing is that El Salvador have an economic freedom where people can produce or sell whatever they want without having to ask the government. But still the government is more mixed. The economy is not growing because there is a lower rank of inflation and the GDP is really low.
